HealthHero acquires Irish telehealth provider MyClinic, as it continues expansion across Europe

Ireland's leading, holistic telehealth service, MyClinic.ie, is the latest strategic acquisition for HealthHero, Europe's largest telehealth company. HealthHero's services cover over 20m people and 1000 businesses across Europe. The acquisition of MyClinic also means that HealthHero now has a direct-to-consumer offer in Ireland, having previously provided services via insurance companies and through businesses to their employees.

HealthHero provides a holistic approach to healthcare - merging separate disciplines such as GP, mental health and musculoskeletal consultations. MyClinic's partnership offering and direct-to-consumer business also follows this holistic approach to treating the 'whole' patient, which makes the two companies an ideal match.

Founded in Dublin by doctors Daniel Clear, James Ryan, and Terry Deeney, MyClinic's services include online repeat prescriptions, mental health, physiotherapy and wellbeing products, as well as video consultations with healthcare professionals ranging from GPs, therapists, midwives, physiotherapists, and fertility specialists.

Dr Daniel Clear, Co-founder and MD of MyClinic, and consultant psychiatrist comments: "The driving force behind MyClinic has always been offering better access to doctors and specialist healthcare advice, so becoming part of the HealthHero team feels like the perfect fit. Our own holistic approach to healthcare is reflected in HealthHero's services, as doctors ourselves, we are pleased that as part of the HealthHero family we will continue to offer effective healthcare support and reach more people than ever across Ireland, with even the most time-poor patients able to access health expertise."

Ranjan Singh, Co-founder and CEO of HealthHero comments: "We are delighted that MyClinic has joined HealthHero's expanding team. There is significant demand for distributed and remote healthcare models in Ireland, where access to primary healthcare can be challenging and unlike the UK is often not free at the point of use. Since the onset of Covid-19 HealthHero saw demand for its UK and Republic of Ireland services increase by over 300%, and MyClinic has reported a similar surge in demand. It's an exciting time for HealthHero to add a direct-to-consumer offering to our services.

“HealthHero’s technology platform and existing commercial relationships in combination with MyClinic’s clinical expertise and products will give providers and patients access to a compelling holistic proposition.”
